Abstract: This fourth edition of a standard text-book on economic entomology in the United States and southern Canada [cf. R.A.E., B 40 49, etc.] has been completely modernized and partly rewritten to bring the text up to date. Some rearrangement of chapters has permitted an integrated review of insect structure, function and biochemical processes, the sections on classification, development and metamorphosis expanded, and recent information on life-histories and control practices has been included in the sections on individual pests, the number of which has been enlarged...
