Abstract
My thesis is that Milton did develop in his youth, mainly under belief in his own reason as an arbitrator in theological dispute: advanced Protestant view that transcends church and king to toleration and his attack on the clergy in "Lycidas" that place already somewhat in the tradition of deism suggested by Toland. Thomas Jefferson, another that same thought in a different manner in a letter to Ezra Stiles, wrote in The Age of Reason, "My mind is my own church," he was stating a basic belief of Milton.
