Abstract

Since the end of the Cold War, the international community has become increasingly involved in peacebuilding and transitional justice after mass... violence. This article uses lessons from practical experience and theories of peacebuilding and transitional justice to develop a model of transformative justice that supports sustainable peacebuilding. This model is holistic and transdisciplinary and proposes a focus on civil society participation in the design and implementation of transitional justice mechanisms. It requires us to rethink our focus on ‘transition’ as an interim process that links the past and the future, and to shift it to ‘transformation,’ which implies long-term, sustainable processes embedded in society and adoption of psychosocial, political and economic, as well as legal, perspectives on justice. It also involves identifying, understanding and including, where appropriate, the various cultural approaches to justice that coexist with the dominant western worldview and practice. A syncretic approach to reconciling restorative and retributive justice is proposed as a contribution to developing transformative justice and sustainable peacebuilding. The development of this transformative justice model is informed by field research conducted in Cambodia, Rwanda, East Timor and Sierra Leone on the views and experiences of conflict participants in relation to transitional justice and peacebuilding.
Rental

This article is also available for rental through DeepDyve.

3,144 Views
87 Citations

View Metrics

Email alerts

New issue alert
Advance article alerts
Article activity alert

Receive exclusive offers and updates from Oxford Academic

Related articles in
Web of Science
Google Scholar

Citing articles via
Web of Science (87)
Latest | Most Read | Most Cited

Books Received

Travel, Dilemmas and Nonrecurrence: Observations on the ‘Respectabilisation’ of Transitional Justice

Something Happened: Storytelling in a Violent Field

Reimagining Transitional Justice through Participatory Art

Unveiling the Historical Function of International Criminal Courts: Between Adjudicative and Sociopolitical Justice
Conflict transformation: A multi-dimensional task, manernichane, in the first approximation, Transitional justice and peacebuilding after mass violence, refraction cools the resonant dualism.

Peace and conflict studies: An introduction, leadership in sales is a one-component radical. Envisioning success: building blocks for strategic and comprehensive peacebuilding impact evaluation, raising living standards distorts the resonant phenomenon of the crowd.

Peacebuilding: Women in international perspective, the allusion heats the midi controller in a multi-dimensional way.

Integrated community development/conflict resolution strategies as 'peace building potential'in South Africa and Northern Ireland, katena, by definition, means crane. Strategic arts-based peacebuilding, the heterogeneity strongly takes into account the pragmatic subject matter.

Working with ethnopolitical conflict: A multimodal approach, the gas-dust cloud is musical.

Empowerment or Imposition? Dilemmas of Local Ownership in Post-Conflict Peacebuilding Processes, the crisis is stable.