Abstract : Member States of the WHO committed in 2005 to develop their health systems so that all people have access to services and do not suffer financial hardship paying for them. This goal was defined as universal coverage, sometimes called...
In striving for this goal, governments face three fundamental questions: (1) How is such a health system to be financed? (2) How can they protect people from the financial consequences of ill-health and paying for health services? (3) How can they encourage the optimum use of available resources? They must also ensure equitable and establish reliable means to monitor and evaluate progress. In this report, WHO outlines how countries can modify their financing systems to move more quickly towards universal coverage and to sustain those achievements. The report synthesizes new research and lessons learnt from experience into a set of possible actions that countries at all stages of development can consider and adapt to their own needs. It suggests ways the international community can support efforts in low-income countries to achieve universal coverage.
