Abstract: This volume presents cancer incidence data from 300 populations, 225 cancer registries and 60 countries (5 in Africa, 8 in South and Central America, 2 in North America, 15 in Asia, 29 in Europe, and 4 in Oceania; some countries are present in more than one continent) during 1998-2002, an increase of 28.6% over the previous volume. The data presented are expanded on by 7 introductory chapters, reduced from 9 in the previous volume: introduction; techniques of registration; classification and coding; histological...
groups; comparability and quality of data; processing of data; and age standardization.
Denominators. The map, registration area, cancer care facilities, registry structure, methods, results interpretation, uses of the data, population source and multiple primary rules used for each of the countries included are presented. Tables on age and cumulative incidence rates, age-standardized incidence rates by histology, and indices of data quality are provided.
