TRA LÉVI-STRAUSS E WITTGENSTEIN. IL CONTRIBUTO DELLE SOMIGLIANZE DI FAMIGLIA.

Author(s): Remotti, Francesco

Abstract:
The author believes that the most important lesson of Claude Lévi-Strauss is the claim that anthropology is a transversal knowledge: its definition of structure goes to this direction. It also holds, however, that the failure of its structuralism is due to an intolerable reduction of the wealth of aspects of the ethnographic reality with the purpose to predispose a frame of limited possibilities (closed system). The author proposes to rehabilitate the thesis of anthropology as a transversal (cross-cultural) knowledge resorting to Wittgenstein’s idea of family resemblances: a flexible approach (open system) that fits the needs and characteristics of anthropological research.
