Nouha Khalifa’s wide reading across the Arabic Islamic tradition and command of sources ranging from Ibn ‘Arab’s al-Futt al-Makkiyya to Ibn azm’s awq al-amam produces an interesting hermeneutic. Her translations and transliterations are excellent and her deep engagement with the tradition is itself engaging, but her negotiation of secondary scholarship is a missed opportunity in this, the first monograph in English to be published on al-Tan`.

Hardship and Deliverance in the Islamic Tradition begins with an introduction addressing al-Tan`’s life, works, and sectarian affiliation and is then structured in three parts addressing the three themes of the journey, love, and generosity. For each theme, Khalifa introduces the topic with a synchronic overview of the Islamic tradition before moving to translate and discuss relevant selected...
