New publishers

Bookvine

Bookvine is a fairly new Nigerian publisher of general interest books, which began publishing in July 2011, offering skeleton publishing services as the book publishing imprint of Vine Media, a Lagos-based and communication consulting company. The company has since developed into a fully-fledged publishing company. Bookvine has worked with more than thirty Nigerian authors to date and has published over twenty titles. The company undertakes both subsidy and traditional publishing models, at the same time as providing a wide range of author services including editing, design, printing, marketing and distribution. This ‘combined’ publishing model without separate imprints, is aimed at reducing “the stigma attached to self-publishing”, and giving aspiring writers the opportunity to have their works published professionally. Author services include ghost writing, editing, design, printing, marketing & distribution and workshops.

Cover2Cover Books

Cover2Cover Books is an independent, South African publisher of fiction and non-fiction. The latter is published through its imprint Faces2Face Books. Cover2Cover publishes “thought-provoking and compelling South African stories: the titles are designed to appeal to a broad market – from teens in townships to book clubs in suburbs.” Their motto is: Cover2Cover Books... “sparkling a reading revolution”. The company believes in empowerment through literacy and that young people – empowered through better literacy – are key to building a successful, just and healthy nation; the leadership of women: innovation using and creative thinking and action as key to a successful enterprise; that ethical behaviour is a vital component of doing business. The shareholders of Cover2Cover are Dorothy Dyer, Ria Haden and Mignon Hardie; Clarity Editorial, an editorial company is represented by its majority shareholder, Pulesa Morudu; and, the Fundza Literacy Trust.
