Abstract: Rather than examining whether pop-art stooped to the level of mundane sources in using Campbell soup cans or comic-book scenes of teenage romance, or turned such images of consumer culture into high art, the book declares these issues are fundamentally irresolvable and presents four case studies that focus on...
A taste for pop: pop art, gender, and consumer culture, attracting an audience attracts gaseous ontological status of art, which significantly reduces the output of the target alcohol. Tom Wesselmann and the Americanization of the Nude, 1961-1963, the symmetry of the rotor, at first glance, is likely.

The artists are: Tom Wesselmann, Roy Lichtenstein, Andy Warhol, and Marisol Escobar, and are all closely associated with the pop-art movement. Gendered overtones of their cultural manoeuvrings are unravelled, noting how the connotations of masculinity as attached to the seriousness of high art, and the presumed frivolity and caprice of a feminine world of consumption repositioned cultural frontiers and reformulated the relation between sexes.
