Describe the present and original (if known) physical appearance

The Morris Carnegie Library is located on a corner lot on Morris' West Side, a short distance from the central business district.

The one story rectangular structure is built of brick from the Menominee Hydraulic Press Brick Company. The roofline features a brick parapet over a projecting cornice with modillions and acanthus leaves at the four corners. The central recessed entrance is topped by a pediment in the cornice and a name plate bearing "CARNEGIE", and is flanked by two granite columns. Windows at the front and sides of the structure are in groups of threes on a slightly recessed plane; upper sash of both windows and the entrance feature a pattern of multiple triangles. Ornamentation includes the uses of relief banding of brick at the corners and at either side of the entrance. These "pilasters" utilize Bedford stone with relief detailing as capitals and at the base. Stone is also utilized at the water table.

The interior of the building features a central desk area and two reading areas at either side. Both the interior and the exterior have good integrity. The building currently serves as the museum of the Stevens County Historical Society.

Builder/Architect Sedgwick & Saxton, Minneapolis

Statement of Significance (in one paragraph)

The Morris Carnegie Library is significant for its locally distinctive and well preserved architectural styling, representing a long-standing educational focus in the city of Morris. The building was constructed with the assistance of Carnegie funds, and designed by the Minneapolis firm of Sedgwick and Saxton (Charles Sedgwick's earlier work includes the Newell House (1888) and the Westminister Presbyterian Church (1896-98), both in Minneapolis). <sup>1</sup> As was the case with most Carnegie libraries in small Minnesota communities, the selection of a prominent site and attention to classical design resulted in a building with a strong local visibility. The lack of alterations, and the continued maintenance by the Stevens County Historical Society since the new Morris Public Library was built in 1968, have preserved the status of this building in the Morris community.
